SCHOOL SCENE

Students learn about storm emergencies

Students from Epiphany School recently paid a visit to the Miami-Dade Emergency Center to participate in StormZone, a hurricane education and preparedness program offered to public and private schools.

During the mock exercises, the students helped emergency officials plan the strategy to extinguish a fire in an evacuation center; they also helped organize the rescue of several hundred senior citizens stranded on an island after a bridge was washed out. Working out of the emergency center, they also oversaw the management of a hospital overcrowded with storm victims.

EMERGENCY TRAINING: John Farach and Christopher Diaz-Silveira, of Epiphany School, review their emergency resources during a mock hurricane drill at the Miami-Dade Emergency Center. The exercise was part of StormZone, a hurricane science education and preparedness program offered to public and private schools.

LEARNING ABOUT THE FARM: Carlos Stalcup, Madison Freeman, Nicholas Aulet, Rowan Bascuas and Alessandra Morrera, students at St. John Neumann Catholic Preparatory School, recently learned about living on a farm. They were taught how to take care of livestock, what is inside an egg and how cows are milked.
